Handout: Evaluation Criteria

Applications for the Rahel Goitein-Straus-Programm of the Medical Faculty of Heidelberg are each evaluated by an interdisciplinary selection committee in which equal opportunities officers (Gleichstellungsbeauftragte) also take part.

Major Criteria for the evaluation include (but are not limited to):

- the applicant's previous scientific achievements, both during their university studies as well as their doctoral work
- the documented preparatory work for the planned project, such as acquired methodological knowledge, lab experience, and publications
- grants and awards already received as well as any third-party funding raised by the applicant
- the innovative impact of the project
- the quality of the research project and the application
- the convincing motivation and presentation of professional career goals
- The selection committee reserves the right to consider familial and social aspects in addition to the aforementioned criteria when assessing eligibility for funding.
